

Tulane University Building Plans

SOUTHEASTERN ARCHITECTURAL ARCHIVE
COLLECTION 137

Tulane University, Arts and Sciences Building (now Gibson Hall), details for stonework. New Orleans, LA. 1893. Harrod and Andry, architects. Ink on linen.

SCOPE and CONTENTS

Project drawings
1891 – 1959
3 flat file drawers

Project drawings for buildings on the campus of Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana, in three groups. The first group comprises the first phase of construction on the campus from 1893-1894. The second comprises buildings built 1901-1912. The third comprises buildings for the Newcomb College campus, 1917-1918. There are also some survey drawings and proposed master plans for the campus. The 1893-1894 structures were designed by the New Orleans firm of Harrod and Andry (Benjamin Morgan Harrod, 1837-1912; Paul Andry, 1868-1946). Structures from 1901-1912 were designed by the New Orleans firm of Andry and Bendernagel (Paul Andry; Albert J. Bendernagel, Sr., 1876-1952). Newcomb buildings were designed by New York architect James Gamble Rogers (1867-1947).

PROVENANCE

The bulk of the plans were given by Charles G. Andry, son of Paul Andry, to Tulane in 1965. Other drawings were transferred from the Tulane University architect's office in 2006.
