SOUTHEASTERN ARCHITECTURAL ARCHIVE COLLECTION 8

J.L. Harris Residence, Delachaise Street and St. Charles Avenue, New Orleans, LA. Ca. 1883. Thomas Sully, architect. Ink and watercolor on paper.

SCOPE and CONTENTS

Project drawings, photographs, correspondence, and specifications;
personal photographs

1882 – 1923

10 flat file drawers; 3 boxes; 1 file cabinet drawer

Records of the office of New Orleans architect Thomas Sully (1855-1939) and successor offices, as noted in the following chronology.

- Thomas Sully 1882-1884; 1899-1923
- Thomas Sully and Company 1885-1887
- Sully and Toledano 1888-1892
(Albert Toledano, 1859-1923)
- Thomas Sully and Company 1893-1895
- Sully, Burton, and Stone Company, Ltd. 1896-1898
(Hayward Burton, 1867-1953);
(Samuel Stone, Jr., 1869-1953)

Records include project drawings, photographs, some correspondence, and some specifications. Also, included are photographs of Sully's leisure activities, dating ca. 1890-1895. Many of these photographs document hunting and fishing trips on his first self-designed yacht, 'Helen'. Dated items span the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, ranging from 1882 until 1923.

Thomas Sully was born in Mississippi City, Mississippi, the son of George Washington Sully and Harriet Jane Green Sully. He was named after his great-uncle, Philadelphia portrait painter Thomas Sully. In the early 1870s he apprenticed in Austin, Texas, with architects Larmour and Wheelock. He then moved to New York, New York to work for architects Slade and Marshall. In 1877, he returned to New Orleans, establishing his own practice in 1881. Sully was one of New Orleans most prolific architects, despite never having any formal academic architectural training. He was responsible for designs for many of New Orleans important commercial and institutional structures, including the third St. Charles Hotel, the Morris and Hennen buildings, the Jewish Widows and Orphans Home, and the Protestant Orphan Asylum. He is best remembered for his numerous residential designs for late-19th century New Orleans elite. Sully also designed and built several river and seagoing yachts for clients and himself. Sully was an avid hunter and fisherman, and was commodore of the Southern Yacht Club in 1893 and 1894. He also spearheaded the formation of the New Orleans Motor Boat Club, and was named its first commodore in 1910. See the digital version of the SEAA exhibit Thomas Sully: At Home and at Leisure.

PROVENANCE

The contents of Sully's architectural office were stored in the attic of the family home, 7 Richmond Place, New Orleans. The home and its contents came into the possession of Sully's daughter, Jeanne Sully West, after his death. At the urging of Bernard Lemann, Tulane architecture professor, drawings and specifications were donated to the original Manuscripts Division (Now Louisiana Research Collection, LaRC) of the library in the early 1960s. Drawings were transferred to SEAA in 1980. Photographs were given at a later date, originally kept with the vertical files in the Louisiana Collection (now also LaRC), and transferred to SEAA in 1980.
