buildings made for documentation for the Historic American Buildings Survey, Washington, D.C. The earlier drawings from the 1930s are mostly half-sized blue line prints of the originals, which are housed with the official HABS records at the Library of Congress. Much of this work was done under the direction of New Orleans architect, Richard Koch (1889-1971), when he was the Louisiana District Officer for the Historic American Buildings Survey. The later drawings, which include originals and copies, are from the HABS projects done by the Tulane School of Architecture, from the early 1980s to 2001.

PROVENANCE

Copies of early drawings were given by various donors in the mid-1980s. Later drawings were given by Eugene Cizek, director of the Tulane School of Architecture HABS project, in 1987; 1999; and 2007.
