

Curtis and Davis Project Photographs

SOUTHEASTERN ARCHITECTURAL ARCHIVE
COLLECTION 175

Automotive Life Insurance Company Building (now New Orleans Public Library, Mid-City Branch), 4140 Canal Street, New Orleans. Curtis and Davis, architects. Frank Lotz Miller, photographer. Ca.1963.

SCOPE and CONTENTS

Project photographic prints and negatives
1940s – 1970s
23 boxes

Project photographic prints and negatives from the office of New Orleans architects Curtis and Davis Architects and Engineers (Nathaniel C. Curtis, Jr. 1917-1997; Arthur Q. Davis, 1920-2011). Included are photographs/negatives from their offices in New Orleans, New York, New York, Los Angeles, California, Berlin, Germany, and London, England. Curtis and Davis was a noted firm, designing many important buildings, regionally in the New Orleans metropolitan area and Louisiana, and nationally and internationally.

Curtis and Davis Architects and Engineers was founded in 1947 by Nathaniel Cortlandt Curtis, Jr. (1917-1997) and Arthur Quentin Davis (1920-2011). Both Curtis and Davis were born in New Orleans, and both graduated from Tulane University School of Architecture. Curtis was the son of another New Orleans architect and Tulane School of Architecture professor, Nathaniel Cortlandt Curtis, Sr. (1881-1953). Davis studied under Walter Gropius at Harvard and received his Master's in Architecture from there in 1946.

In the New Orleans/Louisiana region, the firm designed many important mid to later 20th century buildings, including the New Orleans Public Library, Automotive Life Insurance, Cabrini Church, the Rivergate, the Louisiana Superdome, and many others. They were responsible for many of the area's early Modernist residences. Outside Louisiana, the firm was successful in designing buildings throughout the United States, Germany, Saudi Arabia, and other countries. Of note are the IBM Building in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, the U.S. Embassy in Saigon, and the Medical Center of the Free University in West Berlin.

The firm was dissolved in 1978. Curtis and Davis went on to form their own firms. Curtis was the principal designer for 1996 alterations to the original Howard-Tilton Memorial Library at Tulane University. Built in 1940, his father, Nathaniel C. Curtis, Sr. had a large hand in the design of Howard-Tilton, working in the office of Moise Goldstein, the architect of the building. Davis went on to design the New Orleans Arena, which sits next to their Louisiana Superdome, now the Mercedes-Benz Superdome.

PROVENANCE

Project photographic prints, were given by Curtis and Davis, individually in the 1980s and 1990s. Photographic negatives were given by the family of Nathaniel Curtis, Jr. in 1998.
