William T. Nolan was born in Quebec, Canada where he studied law. He moved to New Orleans in 1900 to become secretary-treasurer of the J.D. Connell Iron Works Company, and later became president of the Standard Manufacturing and Construction Company. In addition to serving as president of that company, in 1908 he set up an architectural office under his own name. In 1910 he was joined by Peter Torre to form the office of Nolan and Torre. Nolan practiced successfully in New Orleans during the first half of the 20th century, executing a considerable body of work in both Louisiana and Mississippi. Some of his more notable commissions include the Casino in New Orleans City Park, Our Lady of the Lake Sanitarium in Baton Rouge, and the New Edwards Hotel in Jackson, Mississippi. The office was successfully continued by Nolan's son, Ulisse, eventually working in partnership with other architects. Important projects of Ulisse Nolan include the present Howard-Tilton Memorial Library at Tulane, the restoration of Armitage plantation in Schriever, Louisiana, and the St. Gabriel Prison Facility in St. Gabriel, Louisiana.

PROVENANCE

Records were given by Ulisse M. Nolan and Thomas B. Holcombe, Jr. to Tulane in 1977.
